Image: Cover of 'Contact' magazine, March 1943. From the collection of the Air Force Museum of New Zealand.

What's behind our Café name? Contact was the national magazine of the Royal New Zealand Air Force (RNZAF), first published during World War Two, from March 1941 through to December 1945. It was briefly revived in 1952 until 1955.

Contact magazine was a way for Air Force personnel to stay connected with what was happening within their service. It reflected the culture of the time, offering news articles, personnel profiles and honour lists, as well as cartoons, short stories and poetry infused with humour and satire. In addition to advertisements of the day, Contact contained illustrations by the RNZAF's official artist, Wing Commander Maurice Conly, who also produced the distinctive cover illustrations.
